I've Got a Secret

So do we. As a matter of fact, we have several secrets. And the first of them is they should have kept this show one.

How has the program stayed on the air since June 19, 1952? Well, it's been a well-kept secret until now, but between you and me and all the slips on TV, it's our opinion that it just got lost. Over the years each season, when all those network executives scheduled all those new programs, each department head thought it was in somebody else's department. And, of course, it wasn't. It's never been in anybody's department. It couldn't have been. Not even a critic has the right to make an accusation like that.

What is wrong with this show? The idea is inane, the execution inept and the effect ineffectual. What's right with it? Well, for one thing, it has a nice group of people. It's nice, for example, to see Steve Allen as host. There are mighty few ad-libbers in Steve's class, and what there are are all too often at liberty. As for Betsy Palmer, she's decorative and she always manages to seem interested—which, on this show, is a full-time job right there. Bess Myerson is decorative also, and if she's not your favorite, look at it this way: No other Miss America is—well, missed at all. Then, too, there's Bill Cullen. We'll always love Bill for what he said a few weeks ago when Steve asked, at the beginning of the show, "All set to play the game, panel?" "No," said Bill quietly.

Finally we come to the question of Henry Morgan—and a good questioner he is. Indeed, on that same show, when Shirl Conway brought in guests from the audience, and a woman appeared and the panel was supposed to guess how many children she had, Morgan never hesitated. "She has," he said, "11 children, eight of whom she's never met." We tell you it almost stopped the show right in its sound tracks. Another bright spot occurred when Edie Adams backed up to the stage, sat down and for several moments, seemingly in a fury, tore up a hat. Afterward, we learned why. It was a backward sequence, and when they ran the tape forward, it was terrific. Then all the panel did a backward restaurant scene with Edie as waitress, and then they ran that forward—and that was terrific, too.

It was a wonderful idea, really—one borrowed from Chuck McCann and his New York children's program. We only wish they'd go further, back to June 18, 1952—not the 19th, now, the 18th, the day before I've Got a Secret started—and then run the tape not forward or backward or sideways or even on. Just off.

To: The 1 man in 4 who will replace his van this year—

Ford Econoline is 80 ways better for '66

Since you bought your last van —three, four, or five years ago —big things have happened to America's No. 1 Van. Our new SuperVan model is 1½ feet longer, has 47 cu. ft. more load-space than the Standard Van. Big engine changes, too. Both Vans offer a choice of two powerful Sixes. The new 170-cu. in. Standard Six has 23% more power. The 240-cu. in. Six is the biggest Six in any compact van, has plenty of oomph for big loads on steep hills. For smooth shifting choose a fully synchronized 3-speed standard transmission or new 3-speed Cruise-O-Matic.

as we see it

■ Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" is one of the half-dozen best plays ever written in America, and CBS's production of it last month matched the original in power and intensity—thanks mostly to Lee J. Cobb and Mildred Dunnock, who recreated their Broadway roles.

The play won the Pulitzer Prize for drama and also the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award when it opened in New York in 1949. It's a favorite of regional theaters; it was also a reasonably successful movie.

■ There's no denying it: The two-hour color presentation was an important television event.

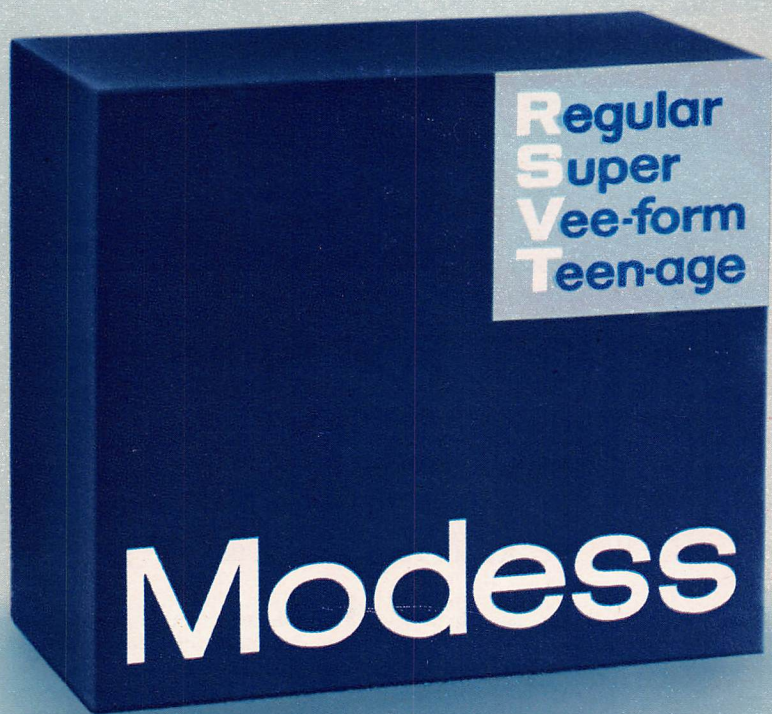

It is perhaps ungrateful to cavil at such a moment, but we can't resist reflecting that CBS put its money on an odds-on dramatic favorite; that "Death of a Salesman," for all its splendor, is the 17-year-old creature of another medium—the Broadway stage; and that television lately has had no inclination to lavish similar attentions on new American plays by new American writers.

■ In cultural matters, television is largely content to be the purveyor of proven goods. It has every right to stand up, flex its muscles and be a creator, as it has the talent and capacity to be—but that would involve risk, and the television networks are most frequently like horse players who splash down enormous sums on favorite horses. You don't win much, but it's a lot easier on the nerves.

Arthur Miller's play was seen by many more people in that television showing than attended its 742 performances on Broadway. Their minds undoubtedly were altered by its power and logic. New plays deserve a similar chance.

■ But enough of these sorehead musings. Let's be grateful for a fine new production of this splendid old play.

SCHOOL FOR SPIELERS

where they teach that the face with the smile will be around for a while,
not to mention 'the fun is in the bun'

BY MICHAEL FESSIER JR.

This, baby, is a hip age, a pragmatic and a live-and-let-live age in which you follow the loot. Last year members of the Screen Actors Guild earned more than a third of their total income of $97,791,000 from TV commercials. What you should do then, baby, is look up somebody who can show you how, somebody like this Maxine Anderson.

Miss Anderson, daughter of silent-screen cowboy Bronco Billy Anderson, calls her course "The Commercial Way," and for $100 for six weeks she'll teach you all about the technique and theory of TV-commercial acting.

Her classes come in three varieties—one for pros, one for amateurs and one for children.

Maxine's amateur class gathered one evening recently in her cozy, pine-paneled Sunset Strip office, out of which she works by day as a TV-commercials casting director. The students were young, attractive and eager, and they sat attentively on metal folding chairs, listening to one of their number, a pigtailed brunette, giving the performance of her life.

"You're listening to the sound of pure, rich Ocean Spray cranberry juice being poured over ice," the girl beamed, reading from the script she held in her hand. "Excuse me . . . [she pantomimed drinking] mmmmm . . . delicious! . . ."

And over at one side of the room, behind her desk, Maxine, a handsome, dynamic redhead given to white turbans and heavy wrist jewelry, nods approval and urges the girl on to even greater cheer with her own wide-angled smile.

The students have studied their jet-age homework well—Ban and Tide commercials instead of Shakespeare and Chekhov—and now one by one they get up before the class and give it their hard-sell best.

A square-shouldered, even-toothed youth gets halfway through a bread commercial ("The fun is in the bun") and Maxine bids him stop. "Start again," she commands, "but this time smile. Make yourself feel absolutely ridiculous."

This time he achieves a grinning ridiculousness and gets a better mark. What the successful spieler must attain, says Maxine, is complete and radiant lunacy.

"Even if the smile seems phony at first, once it's on your face it becomes natural," lectures Maxine. "Look at Caroline O'Connor, who does the Standard Brands commercials. Never once does her face come together. There's no question about it. You do sound different with a smile."

In addition to teaching the importance of smiling, Maxine teaches her students more conventional things like poise and diction and sight reading. She also finds herself de-training old-school dramatic actors toward a goal which she calls "non-acting." "When I send somebody for a job," she tells her students, "the people at the agency often plead, 'Don't have him sound like an actor.'"

Wanted, according to Maxine, are more natural types, real types, provided they are inoffensively middle-of-the-graph neuter. "If anyone speaks with an accent or is foreign looking, there's very little hope," she says bluntly.

It's a pretty stupid business all right—transforming real people into nebishes, helping to foster a vision of a pale, valueless, cotton-candy world of non-people and no-think. But Maxine and her students say they didn't make the rules. They are mostly intelligent people [Maxine has an Oral English degree from Stanford] playing a frequently silly game because it's profitable to play it.

A comedian - musician - songwriter was taking the course to add one more hyphen to his repertoire. "You gotta try everything," he said, with a shrug and a small sigh.

Meanwhile life in this twilight zone of the arts isn't easy. There are 100 candidates for even the most minor housewife-in-the-market role, and every edge you can get helps. Maxine, in fact, emphasizes, even more than special-acting techniques, the art of getting the job in the first place. And crucial to that is striking the right note with your personality. "You must be likable," she says. If they [agency people] don't like you, they feel nobody will, and they won't want you to represent their product.

"Look at Sally Hughes. She's pretty, though no great beauty, but she gets commercials you wouldn't believe because she's a nice person and it comes out. I know a man from New York who's been getting lots of commercials because he always has something to say in an interview, which is important even if you have to fall back on the weather for a topic. They are embarrassed, too, so help them out. Remember, for every commercial there may be 10 people who fit the storyboard but the one most likable will get it."

Maxine is supported in her psychologically fraught advice to the aspirant pitchman by agent Jack Wormser; a man who has made a continued

fortune by putting people into commercials and for whom Maxine once worked. And Wormser, a pleasant, plumpish man, adds this bit of advice:

"If a person doesn't instill confidence, he won't get the job. He can blow it by being too nervous, by talking too much. By the very nature of their jobs advertising people are insecure, and you should do everything to bolster their confidence.

"I can tell if a person's got the stuff by the way he walks in the door. If he's timid, he's lost; and if he comes on too strong, that frightens people. Remember, you have something like a minute to make the right impression. Muff it and you're dead."

End of a losing streak

It's a rough way to go. Maxine tells a story, designed to boost sagging spirits, about someone who went through 12 interviews without getting a part but then got 10 jobs in succession. But Wormser tells a less inspirational tale about an attractive, ostensibly salable ex-client who went 30 interviews without getting a job and who, for all anyone knows, still hasn't gotten one.

Still, as has been well-reported in the past, the rewards for landing the right commercial are immense. Two years ago Susan Brown, a demure, silken-voiced brunette, got transformed into Wanda, the hair-spraying witch. Wanda has subsequently upped Susan's formerly marginal income to $50,000 annually.

TV GUIDE

'That's the most irritating commercial I've ever heard. We'll use it!'

Susan didn't go to Maxine Anderson's school, but she did battle through 10 years of off-Broadway plays and TV soap operas to acquire the finesse that landed her Wanda. And regardless of how well or ill it is doing, professional finesse is the deciding factor in getting commercials. A few grass-green students of Maxine's have gone on to snag a job or two, but mainly it is those who already have a foundation of professional performing experience who make the best use of Maxine's tips.

One day recently two natty, $100,000-a-year, Princeton '32 types (director and agency man) at Screen Gems were interviewing one erstwhile Ophelia after another ("Next month I'm doing 'Antigone'") for the part of a mouthwash-extolling housewife. They trooped in throughout a long afternoon at the rate of about one a minute. Maxine Anderson and Jack Wormser would have been proud to see their teachings borne out.

The girl who boomed in with "I'm Florence, who are you?" got an immediate thumbs down from the interviewers, and the monosyllabic mouse was forgotten the minute she was out the door. More favorably received was Sally Hughes, Maxine's prime example of Miss Right, serene and smiling, chatty but not too chatty, in a quiet beige cardigan over a crisp yellow blouse and white skirt. "Gee, she's a nice lady," the director observed. At the end of the afternoon Sally topped the list of "callbacks"—girls who would be asked to return for the semifinals the next day. Just as Maxine said: Sally knew her business.

THROWING SOME LIGHT ON THE KOOKALORIS

...AS WELL AS
THE BROAD
AND THE BRUTE

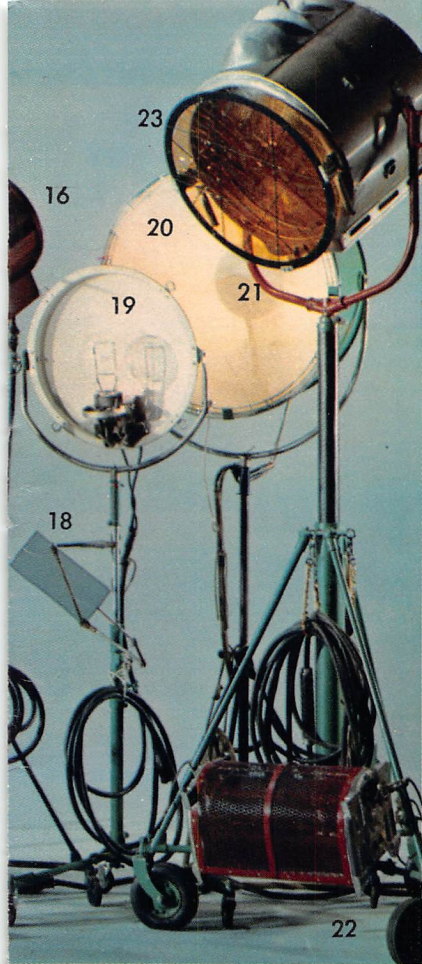

“Call Ding and tell him to get a broad and a brute over here. Close the barn doors on the senior and the half-broad. Knock down big eyes on the right with a skim, and put a kookaloris and a finger on the junior keg. Get a full apple under the frying pan and snoot that inky dink. Get rid of the gobo, sky pan and grid; nail up a T-bone and dot the ice-cream cone. That should satisfy the ham.”

A new kind of pop talk? Not really. It's the way directors and studio hands communicate with one another when they're setting up the lighting for a television scene. The words really do have a meaning all their own, and the meanings vary.

What the man on the set wants is for someone to call Ding Woodhouse, head electrician at Hollywood's General Service Studios, home of Filmways Television (where the above picture was taken), and tell him to bring a 2000-watt boxed light with a flat surface (broad, No. 12 above) to light a large area, and a 200-amp light (brute, 23). Meanwhile, close the black metal shutters (barn doors, 17) over the face of the 5000-watt light on a high stand (senior, 16) to make for less heat while waiting. And close the shutters on the 1000-watt surface light (half-broad, 13) for the same reason.

Reduce (knock down) the intensity on a 10,000-watt light (big eyes, not shown) by covering the right half of it with a gauze screen (skrim, 8, 14, 18). Place a shadow-maker (kookaloris, 4, 5, 6) and a diffuser (finger, 3, 7) on a 750-watt light (junior keg, 15) to break up the light intensity and create patterns on the subject.

Bring a large box (full apple, 1) to raise the height of a screenlike unit (frying pan, 20) placed in front of a bright, 750-to-5000-watt light (ice-cream cone, 21) to soften it by bouncing the radiance back against the cone's white back surface.

Attach a metal conelike piece (snoot, 10) on a small light (inky dink, 9) to soften wrinkles and lines on the face of the actor, and impart sparkle to the eyes. Push out of the way that blackout piece (gobo, 11, used to block out part of the light), the small reflector (sky pan, 19) and resistor (grid, 22). Nail up a metal bracket (T-bone, not shown), to which a light can be attached and kept rigid. Then diffuse the ice-cream cone with a round shape (dots, 2).

Now and then, of course, you might hear someone around the stage say, "Hey, can I move this light over there?" By that you will know he is an amateur.

I had come to this'

The moving story of Neil Hamilton's return from disaster

BY LESLIE RADDATZ

I was afraid. Afraid I would lose my nerve. This was the day. It was to be my last. This day I would kill myself. . . ."

The speaker was Neil Hamilton, veteran of more than 300 movies and half a century in show business, now at 66 playing the part of Police Commissioner Gordon in ABC's Batman. The occasion was the annual Communion Breakfast of Roman Catholics in motion pictures and television. More than 1500 persons were in the ballroom of the Beverly Hilton Hotel that Sunday morning last winter. Bob Crane, star of Hogan's Heroes, was master of ceremonies, and only moments before, the crowd had been laughing at his quips. Then came what someone there described as "thunderous silence—I never heard such silence in my life," as Hamilton began to speak.

"Looking back on it now, it seems like utter madness. It was over 20 years ago, and yet at the time I was convinced it was the only thing to do. I knew it was wrong, but my compulsion to do it stemmed from the fact that it offered a solution—or at least it seemed to. Insurance—money for my family, money that would pay three months' back rent, money for food and the dozen and one essentials necessary to existence. . . . From the top of the heap with a house that took five servants to run, with the second-largest swimming pool in the State of California, I had come to this—the end. . . ."

When Neil Hamilton came to Hollywood in 1925, he had already been in the movies seven years. He had arrived in New York in 1917 with the proceeds of the sale of a $50 Liberty Bond and the ambition to be an actor. At Fort Lee, N.J., the Hollywood of the day, he appeared in such topical pictures as "The Life of General Pershing" and "The Beast of Berlin" and with popular movie stars like Tom Moore, Madge Kennedy, Mae Marsh, Rod La Rocque and Marion Davies.

When acting jobs were scarce, he modeled for the top illustrators in New York—James Montgomery Flagg, Charles Dana Gibson, Howard Chandler Christy, Norman Rockwell and Joseph Leyendecker. It was Leyendecker who painted the early Arrow Collar ads, and Hamilton gained his first fame as "The Arrow Collar Man."

His first big break came when he was put under contract to D. W. Griffith, for whom he made three pictures, "The White Rose," "America" and "Isn't Life Wonderful." In his first five years in Hollywood, Hamilton made more than 70 movies, including the first "Beau Geste," in which he played Ronald Colman's twin brother. When talking pictures came along, he moved into them with ease, appearing in such early classics as "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," "Dawn Patrol," "The Animal Kingdom" and "One Sunday Afternoon."

"The reason or reasons for my loss of position, money, friends and career are unimportant now—water over the dam. Everyone that I had turned to in desperation was very sorry—oh, so very sorry—but where I needed a thousand dollars, I was offered 10. Did I say everyone had let me down? You might wonder why a young man who had once planned to enter the priesthood wouldn't know there was One who would never let me down. . . . I had been blessed with a fine religious mother and father, whose teaching, by word and by example, put the rock of faith solidly under my feet. . . ."

Neil Hamilton, an only child, was born in Lynn, Mass., on Sept. 9, 1899. His school years lasted only until his second year of high school, when the principal called him into his office and told him not to come back. This settled any ideas he or his parents might have had of his becoming a priest. For the rest of the term he left home every morning, climbed to the top of a tree and watched the world from there. When his father discovered that Neil was no longer going to school, he told him that he would have to go to work. The boy was used to work. Before he was 15 he had worked in a clothing store, a drug store, a toy factory, an ammunition factory and a hardware store.

But it was a menial household chore that led to his decision to be an actor. Each day during the continued summer it was his job to collect garbage for his father's pigs at the summer home of theatrical producer Morris Gest, which adjoined the Hamilton farm near Athol, Mass., where the family had moved. Today Hamilton says, "I didn't know anything about acting or actors, but these people were wonderful. They laughed all day, and I wanted to do what they did."

"Through all my troubles, there was one person who never let me down—my darling and wonderful wife. She never found fault, never complained. . . . As I headed toward my goal, I hated myself for what I was about to do to her. The horror, the shame, the bitter disappointment would always be hers, but it was the only way out. I knew it. . . ."

This year, Neil and Elsa Whitmer Hamilton celebrate their 44th wedding anniversary. When they first met, he was the leading man of a stock company in Toledo, Ohio. Elsa was, he says, "the youngest and prettiest theater manager in the country." When the company let him go, he stayed on in Toledo, where he worked at a variety of jobs to be near his fiancée, but finally she persuaded him to return to New York and acting. As soon as he found a berth in a stock company in Brooklyn, they were married. Today, he refers to her as "my girl" or "my exquisite wife." She tried to warn him against the disastrous investment he made in an exhibit at the 1939 San Francisco World's Fair, which wiped out what he had left after the 1929 Crash. There were no acting jobs now for the middle-aged leading man.

"There was a spot high in the mountains above Santa Monica—from which I planned to leap off into space. Four or five hundred feet straight down was the remains of an old quarry, the bottom of which was a honeycomb of big deep holes that wouldn't be explored for years to come. . . . As I climbed toward Sunset Boulevard, I found to my great surprise that I'd turned from the sidewalk and had climbed a steep flight of stone steps that I'd never climbed before and found myself in front of a big front door I'd never seen before. It was the door of the Newman Club on the edge of the UCLA campus, presided over by a gracious, kindly man, Father Benjamin Bowling. . . . I rang the bell. No answer. I rang again. This time the door opened, and there stood Father Bowling. . . . I told him the story—the whole silly, shabby story. . . ."

The priest and the actor talked for many hours that day. Father Bowling told Hamilton about St. John Bosco, "wonder-worker of our own day," and suggested that he make a novena—a nine-day regimen of prayers—to the saint. Hamilton did so. At the end of those nine days, he got an acting job at Universal Studios.

There have been ups and downs since, but Neil Hamilton has never again known despair. For 13 years, he was away from Hollywood, appearing on the stage in "State of the Union" and "Solid Gold Cadillac" and doing television in New York and Philadelphia. In 1957 he and his wife went back West (their adopted daughter still lives in New York). They live in a modest apartment in an older section of Hollywood.

Most of his friends of the movies' early days are dead now. But his friend St. John Bosco is always with him, and he carries with him printed copies of the novena prayers, which he passes out to acquaintances and people he meets. Often he speaks at church meetings in the Los Angeles archdiocese, retelling the events of that dark day a quarter of a century ago, urging others to share his faith.

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

Emmy Night: It wasn't a complete shambles, as it had been a year earlier. The show went off smoothly enough, with a minimum of delay and confusion. There were a few mildly amusing moments, particularly those provided by Kukla, Fran and Ollie and by Jimmy Durante. And there were a few touching ones—when awards were bestowed posthumously on comedienne Alice Pearce (Be-witched), producer David Lowe (“KKK—the Invisible Empire”) and Edward R. Murrow (a special award).

Other than that, however, there is nothing favorable left to be said about the interminable Emmy telecast, which baffled many viewers, antagonized others and, very likely, lulled a large portion of the Nation to sleep.

What was wrong with the show and the awards? So many things, it's hard to know where to begin.

There was, for one thing, the absurdly inflated number of awards. Sixty-one statuettes were parceled out, guaranteeing (A) that few of the people who showed up for the black-tie affair would go home empty-handed; (B) that the West Coast contingent would be appeased (last year, when there were half as many awards and New Yorkers collected most of them, the bellyaching in Hollywood threatened to scuttle the Emmys altogether); and (C) that viewers at home would be befuddled and benumbed by the endless array of awards, many of which were inadequately explained.

But it wasn't just the sheer volume of statuettes that mystified viewers. Some of the awards themselves were incomprehensible. A show designed largely for adults (“A Charlie Brown Christmas”) was selected as the outstanding children's show. The “Ages of Man” was named the best dramatic program, but the illustrious star of the one-man show, Sir John Gielgud, wasn't even nominated for the best-performance award (Cliff Robertson won it for a role in a Bob Hope drama show). Don Knotts, who quit The Andy Griffith Show long ago, was voted an Emmy for a return appearance in one episode of the series. And so it went.

The choices were made by a “blue-ribbon panel” of judges appointed by the hierarchy of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. Who these oracles are, and what their judicial qualifications may be, have not been revealed to the public—or even to the members of the Academy.

As for the show itself, its co-hosts—Danny Kaye and Bill Cosby—never managed to bring it to life. The humor that might have turned a tedious parade into an entertaining spectacle was totally lacking. The best that can be said of Messrs. Kaye and Cosby is that they were not vulgarly obnoxious, as Danny Thomas was as co-host of last season's Emmy telecast.

The TV Academy has been at it for 18 years. One would think that by now they would have come up with a sensible awards structure and learned how to mount a respectable television show. You can't blame those viewers who are wondering whether, after the May 22 fiasco, the Academy and its Emmys are entitled to another chance.

—Henry Harding

NO WORRIES

Enjoyed your May 14 article "Better 'ide the Telly, Ducks!" The Postmaster General doesn't worry about how many people prefer ITV over BBC. BBC gets its money the "easy way" with those collections. ITV on the other hand has sponsors to worry about, so more effort has to go into its shows.

*Eileen Miller
Columbus, Ohio*

COMING UP

Slip us more Mickie Finn's. The show's a knockout!

*George and Diana Towne

FUNNY POLITICIANS

We all enjoyed the satirical forum of "A Funny Thing Happened to Me on the Way to the White House" on NBC. TV has never been more alive.

*B. Elslager
Montgomery, Ala.*

Let's have a new edition of "A Funny Thing Happened . . ." every year. There's certainly no lack of material.

REPEAT AD INFINITUM

NBC, please preserve the tape of "Sinatra—a Man and His Music" very carefully. I recommend a repeat every six months.

*Lavinia Morgan
Kansas City, Mo.*

REPORTERS CRITICIZED

Extremely poor judgment is being demonstrated by network reporters for on-the-spot interviews, to wit, the Shade Gap, Pa., kidnaping and man-hunt and the recent Watts incident. What would a parent whose child has been kidnaped by a maniac answer to an asinine question like, "How do you feel"? The blood was still wet when the television reporters pushed themselves on the bereaved pregnant widow in Watts. Let's use a little more common sense.

*Kenneth G. Martiny

RERUN SUGGESTION

This summer, why don't the networks rerun the shows listed in the "Ten Years Ago This Week" section of your "TV Teletype." They would be much more interesting than last season's series.

LITTLE WONDER

CBS really knows how to hurt a show! They kept pre-empting Trials of O'Brien for one special or another. No wonder it's going off the air.

*Chuck Hamblen

'YEAR OF THE GUN?'

SPECIAL COLOR Life behind the Bamboo Curtain is the subject of this report, first telecast on April 27.

How does China view the U.S., and what policy will she follow if the war in Southeast Asia continues? Producer James Benjamin attempts to answer these and other questions by presenting modern-day China as seen through the eyes of several observers familiar with the land: author-doctor Han Suyin, who compares conditions in her country before the revolution and after; Mark Gayn, who made a lengthy trip to China in 1965 as correspondent for the Toronto Star; Morris Wills, who defected during the Korean War and recently returned to the U.S.; and Jacques Marcuse, who served in Peking as correspondent for Agence France Presse.

Films made in China show her leaders, farm communes, parades, schools, cities, industry and the Chinese A-bomb blast in 1964.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is interviewed briefly at the end of the show. Reporter: John Scali. (Rerun; 60 min.)

6:30 3 4 NBC WHITE PAPER—Documentary

'THE AGE OF KENNEDY'

SPECIAL In "The Presidency," conclusion of "The Age of Kennedy," producer Al Wasserman has tried to relate the Kennedy style to the accomplishments of the JFK Administration.

The emphasis is on foreign policy: the Alliance for Progress, a program to aid South American nations and at the same time change our image there; the problems posed by "wars of liberation" in Southeast Asia; Cuba, with the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion and the missile crisis, which led to a U.S.-USSR confrontation; JFK's attitude toward the emerging nations in Africa; his meetings with De Gaulle and Khrushchev; and the Berlin crisis.

At home: the steel crisis, civil rights and Kennedy's efforts to change the American mood. We also see something of JFK's private life, and the close-knit Kennedy clan.

Historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., who was special assistant to the President, acted as consultant for this "NBC White Paper." Chet Huntley is the narrator. (60 min.)

DON'T BE HELD BACK FROM THE BE

Now you can Be a High School Graduate

WAYNE makes spare time study easy and interesting...includes your choice of valuable job skills, too

TODAY many employers insist you have a high school diploma before they hire you or promote you to a better job. In fact, if you're not a graduate, just keeping the job you already have may get tougher all the time. Why? Because machines are rapidly eliminating the jobs that don't require more education. If you do have a diploma, government figures say you will not only start bringing home more money every week, but you will also have more opportunity and more job security than ever before.

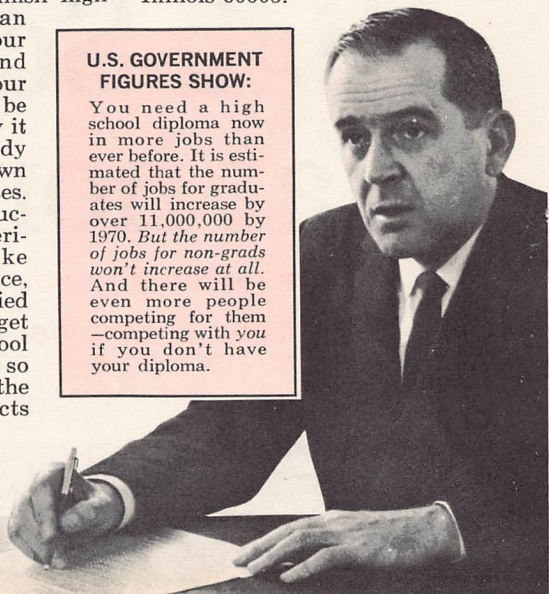

Wayne School can help you earn your diploma and reap the rewards that go with it. You'll finish high school more quickly than you ever imagined — in your spare time at home, and without interfering with your present job. And you'll be surprised to find how easy it is by the modern home study method. You set your own hours; there are no classes. You get individual instruction from Wayne's experienced faculty. You take everything at your own pace, so you are neither hurried nor slowed down. You get full credit for high school work you've completed so far. And in addition to the basic high school subjects which qualify you for a diploma, you may take your choice of practical job skill subjects such as Drafting, Air Conditioning, Civil Service, Typing, Secretarial, Sales, Bookkeeping, Dental Assisting and others—to help you get started in a profitable, secure field. Best of all, the cost is remarkably low.

Whatever your goals — higher earnings, more interesting work, the privilege of saying, "Of course, I'm a high school graduate" — Wayne training can help you achieve them. Mail the postcard at right for free illustrated booklet. Wayne School, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois 60605.

U.S. GOVERNMENT FIGURES SHOW:

You need a high school diploma now in more jobs than ever before. It is estimated that the number of jobs for graduates will increase by over 11,000,000 by 1970. But the number of jobs for non-grads won't increase at all. And there will be even more people competing for them — competing with you if you don't have your diploma.

8:30 5 10 12 CHARLIE BROWN'S ALL-STARS

SPECIAL COLOR This summertime cartoon reunites the "Peanuts" gang from last December's "A Charlie Brown Christmas," which won Peabody and Emmy awards.

The baseball season is in full swing, but manager Charlie Brown finds that his team—five boys, three girls, one dog—has lost interest.

The youngsters are understandably upset: After playing 999 games, Charlie's team has yet to score a win. What's worse, pitcher Charlie has given up 3000 runs to the opposition. "Do us a favor, Charlie Brown," says Lucy before the next game, "don't show up!"

Story and screenplay by "Peanuts" creator Charles Schulz. Animation by Bill Melendez Associates. Produced by Lee Mendelson. Vince Guaraldi wrote the score. Once again, "non-professional" youngsters supply the voices . . . Charlie Brown: Peter Robbins. Linus: Christopher Shea. Lucy: Sally Dryer. Schroeder: Glenn Mendelson. Frieda: Ann Altieri. Pig-Pen: Chris Doran.

HE NEVER LEFT HOME

We're referring to Andy Griffith and Mount Airy, N.C., site of the largest open granite quarry in the world

BY MAURICE CONDON

Despite assurances as hallowed as the Declaration of Independence, there is some doubt that all men are created equal.

And that goes for cities, too.

Take Huron, Ohio. Signs at the city limits inform that the community was Ohio's leading manufacturer of steamboats in 1830. Beyond doubt, the city fathers did considerable archive-delving to unearth that nugget of desperation.

Conversely, consider Mount Airy, a small city nestled in the swelling foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains at the upper tip of North Carolina.

No signs greet you as you drive into Mount Airy. Not that there is no reason to boast. The trouble is, there's an overabundance of good reasons, and possibly the Chamber of Commerce has never been able to determine just who—or what—should get top billing, so bountifully has Mount Airy been blessed.

Any community would be happy to parade the fact that it is the site of the largest open granite quarry in the world. Mount Airy claims this title. "Mount Airy granite is one of the reasons New York is such a big city," pointed out an elderly gentleman in the Snappy Lunch on Main Street. "Take most of them skyscrapers. Big, tall and solid, sure. Made out of Mount Airy granite."

Ample reason for any city to be proud. But there is more.

"Eng and Chang are buried right nearby," said W. Frank Carter, long-time mayor of Mount Airy, now retired.

Eng and Chang? Here?

"Yes. Eng and Chang Bunker. The original Siamese twins. When they retired from their professional careers with P.T. Barnum, Eng and Chang came to Mount Airy to settle down. They married local girls. Plenty of their descendants live around here."

Now you begin to understand the magnitude of the problem that confronted the Chamber when it was faced with erecting road signs.

Griffith got hisself—himself—born here in 1926!

As another sage at the Snappy Lunch ventured, "It don't seem quite fair. Mount Airy got everythin'. It got the quarry. Then Eng and Chang took a likin' to the place and settled here. But Andy Griffith! He could've just as well been born in Fancy Gap, Mocksville, or Beulah!"

"Exactly," affirmed another habitué of the Snappy. "His folks could have found a house to their likin' in Toast, Bottom, Zephyr, Devotion or Coolee-mee."

At this point it becomes understandable that the familiar roadside graffiti that greet the motoring tourist on entering the smallest of communities are missing on the roads that converge on Mount Airy. There's too much to tell, too many splendid but divergent elements to combine in a road sign that must be read at a glance. For they know that the quarry will continue to supply granite to the world; that Eng and Chang will sleep peacefully, their fame secure, their progeny present in abundance; and Andy Griffith—well, he's on the television every Monday night at 9!

He taught school

Born Andrew Samuel Griffith in Mount Airy on June 1, 1926, Andy went through elementary and high school here, considered for a while a career as a Moravian minister, went off to the University of North Carolina. After graduation he taught school—music and drama—married, played the Rotary circuit as a monologist. Discovered through a record he made titled "What It Was, Was Football," Andy went on to Broadway, then Hollywood and into television.

In Mount Airy, Andy's success is relished as another proof that those folks up No'th are, if not uncritical, then easily pleased. Not that this reflects on Andy's ability. Not at all. But as one of the loungers in the sheriff's office contended, "They talk about Andy and his actin'. He ain't actin'! He's just bein' Andy Griffith, like he always was. Now, if he ever starts actin', you'll see somethin'!"

Just as in the mythical Mayberry, the sheriff's office in Mount Airy is the center toward which folks naturally gravitate. Hudson Graham is the sheriff of Surry County. His office is on Pine Street, just off Main, next to Essie's Beauty Shop.

Unlike Andy's office in Mayberry, it has a receptionist-secretary, Mrs. Winnie Lou Marion. While busy and bustling, it still has an air of leisure, though the air crackles with two-way radio messages between the office and the official cars.

A happy note, and one that Andy would approve, is a calendar on the wall, donated by the First National Bank of Mount Airy. It depicts a corpulent fisherman in high waders, obviously a city man, who is being chased from his feast of trout sizzling over an open fire by a mother bear and her cubs. Near-by is a sign that advises: "Don't feed the bears!"

"We're not exactly like Mayberry," said Sheriff Graham. "But then, in many ways we are. Folks come here with their problems, just as they do to Andy. Only thing, his writers are better at contriving happy endings than we can manage.

"Andy has one deputy. I have seven. And they're all kept busy. Always something happening."

Which deputy got the title of "Barney Fife?"

Sheriff Graham laughed heartily. "I guess that had to come. Well, Elbert Smith there, he got the honor." Don Knotts, erstwhile actor in the role of Andy's deputy, would be flattered. Deputy Elbert Smith is a commanding giant of 6-feet-plus and an admitted weight of 240.

Andy's cousin's Fordillac

"Meet another deputy," said Sheriff Graham. "This is Deputy Monroe Boggs, a cousin of Andy's. Monroe, what do you remember about Andy—and you might mention your Fordillac."

Fordillac?

"It's a local joke," said Deputy Boggs. "I took a '58 Ford, real beat-up job, and I installed in it a practically new '62 Cadillac engine. Now, you're a moonshiner. You're on the road with a load and you've got to get the stuff through. You see this ol' Ford ahead. No sweat. You swing around it. Then you get a surprise. The Fordillac takes off like a mountain goat and you can't shake it. Pretty soon, it's passing you! We've brought in several moonshiners that way."

You grew up with Andy?

"Sure did. We're second cousins. You'll never meet a nicer guy."

So everyone says. But he's human. He got mad, sometimes?

"Come to think of it, Andy did. When some of the family kin came to call. And then stay. Sleeping accommodations at the Griffiths' were limited. And when kin came to visit, Andy had to sleep on the floor. He didn't like that."

Into the sheriff's office came Evin Moore, Andy's uncle.

things, coats mainly. His pa and ma couldn't keep him in coats. Liked to chew tar, too, like most kids. County'd tar the roads, they'd chew tar. One time Andy figured to lay in a supply of tar. It melted, ruined his pants, he got you-know-what-for.

"Times were lean. Depression years. Carl, Andy's pa, worked at the furniture factory. Andy, soon's he was old enough, he helped out."

Deputy Monroe Boggs spoke out. "The Griffiths wasn't anywhere near as poor as that family this side of Pilot Mountain."

A twice-told tale

Anticipatory smiles were exchanged. Obviously, this was a twice-told tale.

"Now, you talk about bein' po', they was really po'," said Deputy Boggs, his accent widening and deepening. "So po, theh pappy, that ole boy, he'd holden up a piece o' white bacon ovuh the table and the kids, they'd sop up the shadder!"

After the appreciative gale of laughter, it was suggested that Uncle Evin tell about the time Andy nearly got drug out of the window.

Reminded, Uncle Evin said, "When Andy got finished at Mount Airy High, he went to the University of North Carolina. But money was still hard to come by and he took on all sorts of odd jobs, mostly in the evening, to pay his way.

"Now Andy, he's a good sleeper. Wouldn't trust an alarm clock. So he schemed up a sure-fire way to get up for early classes. He'd tie a piece of rope around one ankle and lower the rope out the window of the second floor where he slept to just above the ground.

They pulled on the rope

"Now, all his friends knew about Andy's rope and when his classes were, so it was a friendly duty to tug the rope until Andy came to the window and said he was up.

"One night some of the fellers was comin' home from a party and they see Andy's rope and they got the idea to have Andy join them. Well, four or five of them took a-hold of the rope and gave it a big heave and kept on pullin'. They pulled so hard that Andy shot out of that there bed and over to the window, and if he hadn't waked up, he'd of gone clear through that open window! As it was, his legs was dangling over the window sill when he came around and saved hisself by holdin' on to the side of the window!"

The devoted viewer of The Andy Griffith Show who visits Mount Airy has the uncanny feeling that he has been here before. A stroll down Main Street confirms this feeling.

Adjoining the Snappy Lunch is the Bluebird Cafe. There is the Tickle Auto Parts store, Utt's Sporting Goods, the Midget Produce Market, the OK Cafeteria, the Snax Shax, the office of Coy U. Short, paving contractor, the Bo-Peep Kindergarten and the Mount Airy Beauty College, the proprietress of which is Thelma Hair.

Uncle Evin summed it up: "Andy never left Mount Airy. He plain took it to Hollywood with him."

DUTCH TREAT

Dutch Treat/continued

Bountiful harvest, food-laden tables, hearty country appetites have made Pennsylvania Dutch food famous. Serve a platter heaped with meaty juicy ribs and sauerkraut; add a hot, pungent apricot applesauce and perhaps a boiled potato; and you will have the best of family meals. Both the meat and applesauce can be prepared ahead of time; reheating improves the flavor of both.

COUNTRY RIBS WITH SAUERKRAUT

Makes 8 to 10 servings

1 pork loin (4 to 5 pounds)	2 cans (#2½ size) sauerkraut,
Salt, pepper, garlic powder	undrained
2 large onions, chopped	1 can (6 ounces) frozen concentrated
¼ cup (½ stick) butter or margarine	apple juice, thawed
2 tbsp. caraway seeds	1 cup water

To make roast easier to carve into slices, have butcher cut between rib bones, and lengthwise down the center of the ribs, cutting the loin into halves lengthwise. These rib bones will then have plenty of meat on them. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and garlic. Put into a large roaster or Dutch oven and roast in preheated hot oven (400° F.), 30 minutes or until richly browned. Sauté onions in butter. Mix onions and their drippings, sauerkraut and caraway seeds. Spoon mixture over pork ribs. Pour apple juice and water over sauerkraut. Cover pan tightly with a lid or aluminum foil. Lower oven temperature to 350° F. and continue cooking for 1½ to 2 hours or until pork is very tender. Serve garnished with parsley and, if desired, boiled potatoes. Slice meat and serve with hot apricot applesauce, pickled green tomatoes, peppers and pickles.

APRICOT APPLESAUCE

Makes about 3 cups

1 cup dried apricot halves	2 cups canned applesauce
1 lemon, cut into thin slices	Water as needed

In a saucepan, combine apricots and lemon slices, add water to cover. Bring to a boil, lower heat, cover and simmer until apricots are very tender. Add more water if necessary to prevent sticking. Add applesauce and beat to blend. Add sugar to taste. Reheat until mixture just starts to bubble. Serve hot.

MY HUSBAND,

DAVID...

A good many viewers wish they could say that

In an U.N.C.L.E. episode with Robert Vaughn and husband David McCallum.

Actress Jill Ireland is probably the envy of most of the teen-age girls in the United States because she is married to The Man from U.N.C.L.E.'s David McCallum. . . .

("He's not movie-actorish," she says.)

They met 10 years ago when they made a movie together in her native England, and were married within days. . . .

("In the picture, I played a young girl who married David and had a baby boy. Within a respectable length of time, that's just what happened.")

They have three boys now—Paul, 8; Jason, 4; and Valentine, 3, who was born in the United States. . . .

("I love America. It has given me an identity for the first time—I found myself as a person. The only thing I don't like here is the emphasis on youth. I don't want to be running around in hip-hugging pants when I'm 35, or wearing bangs to cover the wrinkles in my forehead. I like the woman image.")

She started out to be a dancer in London. . . .

("My family wasn't theatrical, but my mother was interested in dancing. I began taking ballet lessons when I was 5 and made my first professional appearance in a pantomime when I was 12. I left school at 15 and began to earn my own living. By day I worked on an industrial magazine, doing layouts and drawing cartoons. Then I went to ballet class from 7 to 8, and after that I would do an act at a cabaret. I got only about four hours' sleep every night. I had a crew cut and was skinny as a rake. But I think people should try to stretch themselves to the limits of their capacities.")

Since coming to the United States she has appeared in two Ben Casey episodes, My Favorite Martian and three Man from U.N.C.L.E.'s. She will also be a regular next season in Shane on ABC. . . .

("In the last U.N.C.L.E., all the love scenes were between Robert Vaughn and me, with both of us ignoring David completely. But I found I couldn't kiss Bob—it would make me laugh.")

The McCallums live with their children, a basset hound and three cats in a large Mediterranean-style home in the Hollywood hills, where she paints and shares her husband's desire for privacy. . . .

("I'm an isolationist. I don't like to get involved in situations that take so much out of you and give you nothing in return. I have only about two real friends.")

The new $14.95 Agfa Isoflash-Rapid C

We know you're out there.

As eager to record blushing brides, cooing infants and proud graduates, as the next guy.

But not so eager to tackle film spools and fussy loading problems. Or waste a lot of money trying to get good results.

We have a camera for you.

The $14.95 Agfa Isoflash Rapid C.

Don't let the low price tag fool you. It isn't a toy.

It's a fine precision instrument. Capable of taking superb photographs in black and white or color, indoors or out.

And it doesn't expect you to know anything about photography. So it's a lot of fun to use, not a lot of work.

"Rapid" means you don't have to thread the film to load this camera. Just snap in a film cassette and start shooting: 16 trouble-free pictures.

An extra-large viewfinder helps you frame your subject.

An automatic film counter tells you how many shots you have left.

A unique pressure plate keeps the film in perfect alignment, a must for clear, sharp pictures.

And a new rotating flashcube lets you take four shots without changing bulbs. (So if Billy moved on that last one, you can shoot it again. Instantly.)

About the only thing it can't do is say "Smile!"

That's where you come into the picture.

Save 2 feet*

*Your own

A recent test with 358 busy wives showed that an extension phone could save them an average of 76 miles of needless steps a year. Why? Because when the phone rang, they took fewer steps to answer it. And when they wanted to make a call, a phone was handy. An extension in kitchen or bedroom or den could save steps for you and your family, too. The cost? Only pennies a day to double your telephone convenience. To order, just call the Business Office or ask your telephone man. Why not do it today?
